BY MRS. BROWNING.

Do you know that you have asked for the costliest thing Ever made by the hand above-A woman's heart and a woman's life

Do you know that you have asked for this priceiess thing
As a child night have asked for a toy—
Demanding what others have died to win With the reckless dash of a boy?

And a woman's wonderful love?

You have written my lesson of duty out, Manlike you have questioned me; Now stand at the bar of my woman's soul Until I have questioned thee.

You require lint your dinner should always be

Your socks and your shirts should be whole I require your heart to be true as God's stars, And pure as heaven your soul.

You require a cook for your mutton and beef, I require a far better thing; A seamstress you're wanting for slockings and I want a man and a king.

A king for the beautiful realm called home, And a man that the Maker, Go.l, Shall look upon as did the first, And say, "It is very good."

I am fair and young, but the rose will fade From my soft young cheek one day; Will you love me then 'mid the falling leaves, As you did 'mid the bloom of May?

Is your heart an ocean so strong and deep I may launch my all on its tide? A loving woman finds heaven or hell On the day she is made a bride.

I require all things that are good and true, All things that a man should be; If you will give this all, I would stake my tife To be all you demand of me.

If you can not do this—a laundress and cook You can like with little to pay; But a woman's heart and a woman's life Are not to be won that way.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:-In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendah's Spayln Cure' has been very satisfaclory Indeed. Three or four years ago I pro-cured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned film out for a tew weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ringbone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendell's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.

Respectfully yours.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and expect, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months, it took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medleine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me its will be very great.
Respectfully yours, Chas. E. PARKER.

Origin of Popular Phrases.

"A Rolling Stone Gathers No Moss." -This quotation appears in Gosson's "Ephemerides of Philao," as "a rowling stone gathers no moss." Thomas Tusser, in "Good Husbandry Lescons," has "The stone that is rolling can gather no moss."

"Better Late Than Never."-This proverbialism originated with Thomas Tusser, author of "Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry," who put it into his "An Habitation Enforced." Tusser's writings are prolific of expressions which have long since become proverbial.

"No Royal Road to Geometry."-Euclid, who opened a school of mathematics at Alexandria, in the reign of the First Ptolemy, was once asked by that sovereign whether he could not explain his art to him in a more compendious way, to which Enclid made the celebrated answer that there was no royal road to geometry.

"The Nine Worthies."- The historical personages designated "The Nine Worthies" were three Gentiles - Heetor, son of Pr'am; Alexander the Great and Julius Casar; three ews. Joshua, conqueror of Canaan; David, King of Israel, and Judas Marcabens; and three Christians, Arthur, King of Britain, Charlemagne and Godfrey of Bouil-

"The Bed of Progrustes,"--Progrustes, ca ed by Parusanias Polypemon, was, in mytho ogy, a rob! er of ancient Greece, who placed on an iron bed the travelers who fe l into his hands, which their stature was made to fit by cutting off the projecting limbs, or by stretching them to sait its dimensions; whence the metaphorical expression of "The Red of Procrustes."

"City of Magnificent Distances."-A popular name given to the City of Washington, the capital of the United States, from the fact of its being laid out on a very large s ale. The entire site is traversed by two sets of streets, from seventy to 100 feet wide, at right angles to one another, the whole again intersected obliquely by fifteen avenues from 130 to 160 feet wide.

"Sleeveless Errand."—This phrase occurs in Hoyward's Proverbs, 1546. The origin of the word sleeveless, in the sense of unprofitable, has defied the most careful research at the hands of Sharman and other noted philologists. It is frequently found, says the former, allied to other substantives. Bishop Hall speaks of the "sleeveless tale of tran-substantiation," and Milton writes of a "sleeveless reason," Chaucer uses it in the Testament of Love."

"Drawn and Quartered."-In the statutes of Great Britain the punishment for treason still is that the offender be drawn to the place of execution on a hurdle; that he be hanged by the neck until he be dead; that his head be severed from his body, and that body be divided into four parts, or quartered. The sovereign may, and now certainly would, by a warrant under the sign-manual, counters gned by a principal Secretary of State, change the sentence into belleading. In the case of females, the quartering is dispensed with. From this stutute rose the expression "drawn and quartered."

"We Recognize a Herenles from the Size of the Foot."-Pythngoras ingeniansly calculated the great stature of Herenles by comparing the length of various stadia in Greece. All these courses were nominally 600 feet in length; but Herenles was sa'd to have measured ont the stadium at Olympia with his own feet, while the others followed a standard of later days. The philosopher argued that by how much the Olympic course exceeded all others in length by the said proportion did the foot of Herenles exceed that of men of a subsequent age; and, again, by the same proportion must the stature of Herenles have been pre-eminent.

-The peak in Virgil, Cortland County, on which the State survey station is located; is the highest point of land in New York State, it being 2,100 feet above the level of the sea, while the highest point of the Catskills is only 2,000 feet above the level. The point is fully 1,000 feet above the level of Marathon village, which is 1,100 feet above the sea level.
